Farmers Unite.

A. F. A. and S. of E. amalgamate as the "United Farmers of Alberta."

The conclusion of what was probably the most important gathering of representatives of the agricultural interests ever held in Western Canada was reached on Friday when the convention which merged the Canadian Society of Equity and the Alberta Farmer's Association into the new organization of the "United Farmers of Alberta" adjourned with the work for which they had assembled completed and the hopes of those who have worked assiduously toward that end completely realized.

The new organization starts in business with a membership of 5,000, representative of every phase of the agricultural interests of the west. To the farming business they will bear the same relation as does the local board of trade to the mercantile interests, and their deliberations and resolutions will be looked forward to in future as representative of the expressed desire of the farming industry of the province.

Social Meeting.

This is the Chinese New Year and the local Chinamen held a banquet on Wednesday night.

Rev. D. McKenzie, of Calgary, was the preacher in Crossfield Presbyterian Church on Sunday last.

P. L. McAnally, Official Auditor. All books must be properly closed. Otherwise an extra charge will be made.

Mrs. J. Lennon, who has been visiting her parents at Doyon, N. D. returned to Crossfield on Tuesday after spending a month there.

The new piano for the Oddfellow's Lodge in Crossfield arrived last week and has given good satisfaction. It was supplied by the Heintzman Co.

When you want a loan on your farm see Hultgren & Davie. They place it in the best companies, quickest return, and only 7 and 8 per cent interest.

J. Morgan of Dog Pound, was a visitor to Crossfield this week. He expects to receive visits from some of the bachelors around shortly, as he has a big daughter now—two months old.

All accounts due to Sutherland & McKay must be settled before February 1st or else will be placed in the hands of a solicitor for collection.

Sutherland & McKay.

Work at West Brook School is at a standstill want of a teacher. J. T. Boucher is anxious to secure one soon and each letter he gets at Dog Pound post office he thinks should be an application for the vacant post.

We learn through an Ontario paper that Robert Cronklin who was barbershop for some time died in Hamilton about the beginning of the year. He had a lovely disposition and many here will regret to hear the news.

The road from the Dog Pound post office to Cochrane is reported to be in fair condition. It is well graded and is a great help to the district. We would like to see more good roads around here. They help the growth of a town to a considerable extent.

The young man who was killed out west was named Masters. The load of logs he was bringing in from the woods, tipped over on him, breaking his neck and smashing his head. Death must have been almost instantaneous. He was buried in West Brook Cemetery on Saturday.

Mr. William Nixon returned on Thursday morning after a month's visit to Doyon, N. D. He had not been there for about seven years and found a great improvement in the buildings around his home there. The weather however has not improved as it got down to 40 below zero and blizzards and snowed at the same time while he was there.

Mr. Burkholder, when seen by our representative in Carstairs this week stated that he intended building on front street lot shortly. Mr. Hoffman, who recently purchased the lot adjoining, also intends building, as does Mr. W. E. Boyle. Mr. Hoffman is to come in in the same block. When these buildings are completed it will considerably improve the appearance of the front street as all the above four lots adjoin one another and are at present vacant.

Methodist Sunday School is held at 2:30 and a preaching service at 3:30 every Sunday afternoon.

Big Sales of Harness and Saddlery are taking place in Carstairs. See our advt. columns.

E. J. Gregory left on Thursday evening on a visit to the coast. He expects to be away for a couple of weeks.

Church of England service will be held in the School-house, Crossfield, on Sunday next at 3:30 p. m.

A few ready to wear Hats to be sold at a reduced price, children caps and Bonnets going also.

E. Hall-Brown.

A concert and the postponed drawing for a horse and buggy will take place in Ontkes & Armstrong's hall on February 4th in aid of the Roman Catholic Church.

The lot on Railway Street on which Mr. Cowling's building stands has been sold to Ching Hang and Jim Kee who intend to build on it later on.

We understand that the town lot north of Mr. Smith's shoe shop has been purchased by some one who does not wish his name made public and that a business place will be erected thereon next summer.

Mr. C. A. Bolton has just received word of the death of his father John Mason which took place in Nelson, B. C. last Saturday. Mr. Mason left Crossfield in November thinking to benefit by the change to B. C. We extend our deepest sympathies to the bereaved ones.

The implement firm of Edwards and Brown is no more. Mr. W. B. Edwards has purchased Mr. Brown's interest in the business and will in the future run the business by himself. We are glad to know that Mr. Brown does not intend to leave us but will go for farming in the future.

C. Dickens, of Calgary the old country watchmaker who has arranged with Mr. E. J. Benton, Barber, to have repairs for his watch, has proved himself to be both reliable, competent and conscientious and will give the same satisfaction to Crossfield customers as he does to his Calgary patrons.

TRAVELLER'S VALUABLE FIND

Travelling on the I.C.R., Mr. Harry Towers, St. Paul Street, St. John, N.B., found a box of Zam-Buk, the great skin balm. He had suffered from severely chapped hands at the time so applied the balm. He says: "Zam-Buk eased the pain and smarting, healed the cracks, and made my hands quite smooth. Finding it so good I kept a supply handy, and have since proved it a really wonderful healer. It heals cuts, sores or burns healing, and will not look like new to be without a supply."

Mr. Towers is also one of those who wear the hand balm of Zam-Buk. There is no such disease will not relieve and cure. Its fame is spreading everywhere, and it is now regarded as Nature's greatest discovery. Workshops, on the farm or in the home. No traveller should be without it. One should always have it in his box always ready for use. It can be rubbed readily on the hands and face before retiring each night will keep the skin soft and free from nags.

If you have a sprain, a bruise, or some irritating skin disease, which has defied all ordinary remedies, apply Zam-Buk. It first kills the germs, then it kills off all harmful bacteria. Then it builds up new tissue cell by cell—just as a bricklayer lays row after row of bricks. Then it covers the wound with a healthy skin, and the cure is effected!

Zam-Buk is also a cure for piles. It gives relief to the mind of the sufferer from burning pains. Skin-diseases, such as eczema, itch, ulcers, barber's rash dashes due to blood poison, etc., cannot resist its power.

Put Zam-Buk on, and it is an ideal combination of power and purity, 50c.

"Say," queried the would-be humorist, "where is that place, Atoms, that so many people are blown to?"

"It's just the other side of Edgley, the place in which so many people are hanged," answered the scean man.—Chicago News.

Sudden transition from a hot to a cold temperature is apt to bring on setting or dry coughs, unconscious subjection of light for heavy clotting, are fruitful causes of colds and the resultant cough set periods of periods of weak health. Among the many medicines for bronchial disorders so arising, there is none better than Biote's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. Try it and become convinced.

"I don't know that Napoleon was much," said the married man.

How now?

"I believe I use as much strategy to get a night out as he expended in the Austria campaign,"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

One of the alpinism schemes proposed in Glasgow to aid the unemployed is that of the municipal corporation to construct at a cost of $600,000, a great bridge across the Firth of Forth and the Clyde, and thus to link the North Sea with the Atlantic. A modest cause joining the Firth of Forth and the Clyde, and thus it forms in the mid-Victorian period, one of the wonders of the British Isles. It is forty-five miles long, with a rise of 155 feet.

A NURSE SHOULD KNOW—

That orange juice with cracked ice can often be taken by a patient who can retain nothing else.

That orange juice, being laxative, is sometimes over prescribed for typhoid fever patients.

That chocolate, though nourishing, often causes dyspepsia when the digestion is weak.

That the nervous patient should have eight or nine hours of sleep.

That the patient should be allowed to come in the sick person in allowing to have company just before bedtime or unless to exciting reading.

That one should never ask a sick person, "What can I do for you?"

A small duty service often counts more than quality or variety in the invalid's meals.

That the nurse should never save steps when the patient's appetite is capricious. A small portion often meets a larger one nauseates.

An extra trip to the kitchen is better than heated up trays.

That a sickroom should never be made a thoroughfare or the gathering place for the family.

That spilling with alcohol and water will reduce fever several degrees.

That having a patient hold her breath will often prevent a spasm of the heart.

That persons subject to rheumatism or weak heart should not take baths that are ice cold.

In Ironing Lace.

If you iron lace or embroidered underclothing, lay it on a table covered with several thicknesses of fan-fuel and no muslin over them they will look much neater if ironed in the ordinary manner, as the flannel "gives" and the raised work stands out.

Time Has Tested it.—Dr. Thomas Electric Oil has been on the market upwards of thirty years and in that time it has proved a blessing to thousands of invalids. Among the many medicines for bronchial disorders so arising, there is none better than Biote's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. Try it and become convinced.

A stout, over-dressed woman sat talking to a friend. She said:

"Yes, since John came into my life we have a nice country house, horses, cows, pigs, laundry, etc."

"I'm sorry," broke in the other, "you can have all the fresh eggs you want."

"I'm sorry," continued the hen, "you can lay if they want to, but in our position, it isn't at all necessary."

Repeat it—"Shiloh's Cure will always cure my coughs and colds."

Refuses to be Crossed.

That the great difference between the tempo of the young generation and that of the youth whose ideas show up according to the teachings of Mrs. Huxley, has been increased by a little fifteen-year-old girl, who was laboriously spelling her way through a reading lesson.

"Always speak the truth," she read.

"Be gen-tile and quiet."

"Never slam the door and shout and scream a great deal."

"At the table eat slowly, not in a greedy manner like a pig."

Suddenly the little girl shut the book with a tremendous bang, and announced with firmness, "I'm not going to let any old third reader boss me like that!"—Philadelphia Ledger.

Pills of Attested Value.—Parmalee's Vegetable Pills are the result of careful study of the properties of certain roots and herbs, and the action of these on the body, particularly in relation to the digestive apparatus.

The success the compounders have met with attests the value of their work. These pills are the best cleansers of the system that can be got. Their excellence was recognized from the first and they grow more popular daily.

Little Harry, who was spending a summer in the mountains, stood one day gazing at a Scotch collie, a young man who had the dog, the boy's admiration for the colie, he added.

"How do you any animals at home, Harry?"

At this the little lad replied, after pondering a moment:

"Yes, we have dogs."

"Quite so," answered the lawyer.

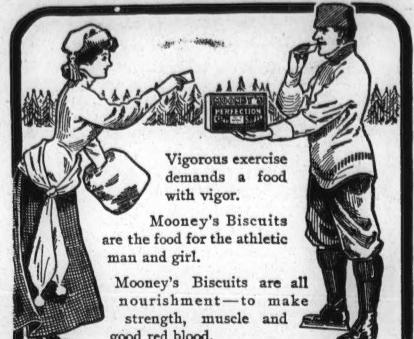

"Your explanations are perfectly satisfactory."

THE OLD CIRCUS POSTER.

Pretentious Language With Which the Show Was Described.

The grandiloquent extravagance of language of the old time circus poster is illustrated by this reproduction, which is reproduced by this reproduction.

"There will be presented a resplendent series of sublime, moral, interesting, instructive, amusing and wonderful scenes which would appear entirely too fabulous if expressed in an ordinary language, but which it is only fitly appreciated. These great displays will unfold in all the loveliness and beauty of enchantment, carrying the minds of the bewitched or spellbound spectators on a tour of pleasure which the imagination is sure to dream of after reading a few pages of 'Arabian Nights' Entertainments.' Words are really wanting to give adequate expression. We must be allowed to let our imagination run riot in the language to fully portray a semblance of the reality. Zoömytery may be learned at this great college in a single evening. Here the visitor will see the most marvellous specimens of the zoömyteric race that live in the air, earth or water and upon wings of gold and silver plume in the cerulean arch, and in reference to these the corps of superintendents in courtly dress will elucidate the peculiarities of each with guarded suavity."

THE TWO ROMEOs.

Mrs. Siddons' Opinion of David Garrick and Spranger Barry.

David Garrick and Spranger Barry were the chief attractions of the season in London. Barry played it at Drury Lane on the Monday, and Garrick played it the next night at Covent Garden, and the town was divided as to which was the greater. In fact, there was quite enough excitement about it, that they acted it upon very different lines and with such harrowingly different conceptions that the people argued the case as to which Shakespeare intended. The fact is, however, that Garrick's interpretation suited it best to act; in that way it would do for another temperament the other way.

It is well known that Mrs. Siddons, who was the Juliet, alternately with the same Romeo, whom she considered better of the two, and she said:

"It is difficult to say. They are both wonderfully great, but I like the balcony scene. In the balcony scene Garrick seems so eager, so intense and so full of fire and spirit that I'm afraid he'll jump up in the balcony to me, and Barry is so lovable and fascinating that I'm afraid I shall have to jump down from the balcony to him."

Quite a few of the boys intend hearing Lena Duthie at the "Bobbie Burns" Concert in Calgary on Monday 25th.

We are sorry to hear of the serious illness of Mr. Laf. Vanisick's mother. Last reports say she is slightly improved.

Church of England service will be held in Glenroy & MacTarnack hall Airdrie on Sunday next at 11:30 a. m.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Farr were surprised on Monday evening last when a large gathering of their friends met at their residence to wish them "Bon Voyage."

The Stock-Judging School held here on Thursday and Friday last was well attended, considering the severity of the weather. The first day was devoted to Horse Judging and a large number of splendid animals were shown making the contest in some of these classes very keen. The cows were not well represented on the following day but the judging was closely watched and as a result we expect to see a larger number of farmers take up the important branch of dairying.

At the auction given in Sunny Alberta to the Hamilton Old Boys at Vanisick Bros' shack the boys present were Benj. Mitchell, E. Brown and J. Whitfield. They were accompanied by Miss Myrtle Vanisick, Rev. Miss Florence Vanisick and Mr. and Mrs. C. McLean a number from Airdrie and on the following day their coachman H. B. Ross assisted them to the Baxter Reed ranch where they saw eighteen hundred cattle and the same evening took them to meet the eleven o'clock train. The boys when leaving reported the best time of their life and wished everybody a Happy Alberta and a Happy New Year.

Troubles of an Ambitious Pear

"I CANNOT bear,"
Complained the pear,
"To always be
Just stupid me—
A pear unknown,
Forlorn, alone."

NOW the Ambitious Pear became a robin on purpose to give Poily Evans' friends among the little girls and boys a nice drawing-lesson. And the Pear especially asks that you try your very best to change him from his first form to a dainty robin. Next week the Ambitious Pear will give another lesson which every one of you will be able to copy.

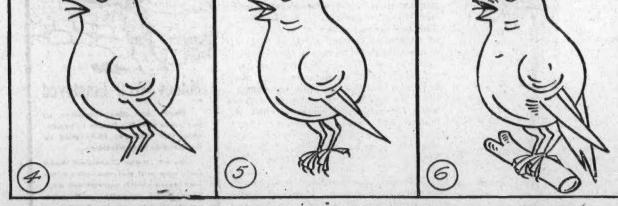

At once a change,
Most passing strange.
Came o'er this rare
Ambitious pear:
He soon became
A robin tame.

The bird, they say,
To his dismay,
No vultures found
Upon the ground,
For, please remember,
It was in December.

Now the Ambitious Pear became a robin on purpose to give Poily Evans' friends among the little girls and boys a nice drawing-lesson. And the Pear especially asks that you try your very best to change him from his first form to a dainty robin. Untidy Streets.

At the age of nine made her first visit to a large city, and having previously learned something of neat house-keeping, she, on observing the large number of telephone and electric light wires, exclaimed, "Papa, what makes them have so many cobwebs in the street?"

Pity Wasted.

"I'm sorry, Willie," said a friend, "that your father's house was burned down yesterday. Was there nothing saved?"

"Not you, or me, or poor old Jessie," was the quick reply: "our old clothes were all burned in that fire, and now we can never make 'em up for me."

Why She Didn't.

Priscilla—Whenever Jonas gets angry with me he pulls my hair!

Fond Uncle—Too bad! Do you pull, too?

Priscilla—No, Mr. Fong Uncle (pleased)—And why, dear? Priscilla—Because 'tain't long enough!

The Stork Legend

WITHIN the confines of Fairy-land for a long time there had existed native birds which we know as storks. These birds were kept as nurses to the little human babies, which reposed upon immense lily pads floating upon a great pond. It was very lonely about this pond, as the fairies often had no one to come and less still when the babies were taken away. And after the storks had watched over their charges for many years they began to find the time somewhat dreary. So they took count together of their charges and found that the result of this meeting was that when the fairy who had sole charge of distributing the babies among human folk came for a baby, she gave the permission you desire."

The very next day when the fairy came to the pond she summoned all the storks to her.

"I have given you the fairies consent to have you go out into the world," said she, "provided you are willing to do a little work in return. Wherefore some of the fairies have spent much time away from home in the carrying of babies to their mortal parents. As the queen is actually in charge of the services of these fairies, she commands that you undertake the work. She has given you too, in return for this service, the human folk will be only too glad to let you build nests upon their houses, and that they will be very fond of you and respect you."

A Donkey's Work

WILL Sir John, the King of England, and Lady Dukes gave a garden party not long ago to their friend, Jessie. Jessie is only a donkey, a mighty n'e'er doney, I s'pose, as the party was for the benefit one of the storks appointed by his fellows, said unto the sprite:

"NURSE OF THE BABY MORTALS."

"Gracious fairy, we have served ye for hundreds of years without remuneration, and now for a change we long to go away from this lonely spot. Won't you release us, in order that we may go into the world? We should like, oh, so much to see these mortal folk, and grown up we should like to see the other animals and birds as well. Please, good fairy, grant our request!"

"But, do," replied the fairy keeper of the babes, "until I have spoken to our Queen Fairy. True it is, however, that you have deserved faithfully and well, and shall surely be worthy of you to the queen, begging that Joyfully the storks thanked the fairy for her kindness, and then promised to do exactly as the fairy commanded.

At once, therefore, each stork picked up a little baby from the lily pads and flew rapidly away with it to the world. Here they built nests upon the houses after they had descended from the clouds, and lived in happiness ever after.

But the storks never forgot their duty of bringing the wee babes from the clouds to the mortal parents and their grandchildren and their great-grandchildren still continue to swear their allegiance to the queen in this same way, as well as to make mortals happy.

Wonderful Map.

ONE of the greatest objects or curiosities in the world is a map of France made of precious stones, which was presented to that country by the present king. The map is forty miles square, and is made of gold and precious stones. The gold came from Siberia, and the precious stones from the Imperial Russian mines. It is framed in silver and gold. The sun is represented by pale and precious marble, and foreign countries (necessarily included)—England, Germany, Scotland, and Spain are represented in dark stones. Some of the gems are so rare they are never found in commerce. One hundred and six of the important towns in France are marked with diamonds, and the islands in gold, and the towns themselves are marked in jewels. Paris is represented by a huge ruby. Havre by an emerald, and the Rhine by a diamond. The Seine is represented by a large rock crystal. Rheims by a tourmaline. Nantes by a beryl. Bordeaux by an aquamarine. Most of the stones are set in gold and from the Ursis, which is green by day and a red blue at night, and so on for all the towns. The map is valued at $40,000, and came as a gift of the Emperor of Russia. The French jeweler said if such a map was ordered from them they would charge double than sum.

Dickman's Den

IT was ever so much to do at Carmouche, near Dundee, Scotland, where Roy Mortimer was spending a few weeks with his Aunt Agnes. A golf course extended across the grassy reaches. And, then, it was very interesting, indeed, to walk among the sandhills, which were covered with the wind into little wavelike sand hillocks and sand hollows. And among parts of the sandhills were many little holes in the sand, over which the birds built their nests. Some people came too near the nests. Sometimes, however, the birds were the targets practice of the volunteers at Barry. Roy found on the sand a postcard which had been left to him home, too.

It was a picture of all was a trip along the coast among caves and cliffs, climbing. Under the guidance of his cousin Emma, who had often examined these caves, Roy had shown Mason's Cave, after having examined the hole in the sand. At the end of this cave, which ran back about 100 feet, there was a bubbling spring of clear cold water.

"Suppose we lunch here," suggested Roy, who had brought a lunch basket, which by this time had grown unattractively, "and then go to drag a drink from a silver cup."

"I suppose it is necessary that is much nearer," replied Emma.

So they trudged to Dickman's Den. A little way off, they could see a cabin, by which, Emma said, the smugglers in the days of the Revolution had stored illegally to land, under the very noses, of the coast guard.

Having enjoyed luncheon, the two started for the entrance of the cave. As soon as they reached it, Roy observed that the rain clouds looked very threatening.

"We may have rain within a few moments," predicted Emma, "but I don't believe it will last in the cave until the storm blows over."

In the meantime, the wind had risen and the waves now began to beat against the rocks with some violence.

Shortly the rain fell and the gale grew worse.

As Roy and Emma sat on a rock to rest, a shelter offered by the cave.

It soon began to grow very tiresome, however. Roy strolled toward the entrance of the cave, and, as he did, a fragment of stone and flint hit him, striking the stone. Instead of rebounding, however, it came straight at him. Roy walked quickly toward the entrance, but the stone hit him in the spot at which he had alighted. He rolled up the dark, gloomy walls, that a tiny beam of light shone through, and lit into the rock. It must have rolled because of great force, which had carried it through a hole it had made in the rock.

"Come on; let's see what this place is!" cried he, excitedly, to his cousin. They had now got out of the shelter, and were entering in the rest of the door, effecting a large enough entrance. From the apartment beyond there came such a rush of evil-smelling gas that the boy and girl were almost suffocated. Roy took a piece of paper from the beach basket, and, after lighting it, tossed it into the secret chamber.

When it was safe for them to venture again, they went through the little door, finding themselves in a room apparently about ten feet square and seven feet high.

All at once Roy heard by means of a rattle paper which he carried, an old chest in one corner. It was a trunk which he had brought with him to drag it out through the door into the mud gave. Again the large rock was utilized to break in the lid. Although further difficult, this was at last accomplished.

Then, exposed to the eyes of the astonished boy and girl were all manner of rich silks and fabrics, carefully bundled and stored in the mass of men behind.

Delighted with their discovery, they opened the lid and took out the chest back, where they had found it, and started off home, noting that it had not been broken.

"I bet this things were left here by the coast guard," said Roy, "to save us." And he had the work cut out to get the lid closed again.

Of course, the chest of silk was confiscated by the government, and would be used for the adventure and by the culprits of the coast guardmen.

Thrilling Adventures of a Boy Soldier

"Colonel REBAUT," said the marchion to his boy officer, "the world which Colonel Lathorne rescued from the German Legions has rendered him dangerous."

"I intend to relieve him for a while and place you in command of his regiment. You have had no work cut out for us, and I want the lancers to be under most competent leadership."

The young officer slightly bowed at this compliment, saluted, and made his way to the new post.

There was indeed strenuous work ahead. Having accompanied the general on his first day as far as Conflans, he fought the lancers and dragons, on the 16th of August, found themselves confronted by a large force of the enemy, stretching in a semicircle

The regiment of French lancers swept upon the Nineteenth Prussian dragon regiment a hurtling. Over the first few rows rode into the mass of men behind. The French dragons closely followed in the charge. Some French and Prussian lancers fell in battle, confounding hussars, lancers, dragoons, cuirassiers struggling in a mass.

Now it so happened that the French lancer, led by Rebaut, had changed their uniform but a short time previously. Their white parade uniform had been replaced by black uniforms and a bicorne of silver, a device which made them stand out as some of the Prussian cavalry regiments. And some of the French dragons, following up the attack of the lancers, mistook the lancers for foes.

"PASSED HIS SWORD THROUGH RICHET'S BODY"

Thus it was that a young officer of the Third Dragons passed his sword through the body of Sub-Lieutenant Richet, of the lancers. The soldier received mortally wounded in his saddle, but still had the consciousness to fall to the ground, gashed to his adversary.

"I am a Frenchman!"

When the dragon discovered by these words that he had been struck in the heart, he was filled with remorse. In despair, with his helmet lost and his sword still red with the blood of Richet, he came to the side of Col. Rebaut.

"Colonel Rebaut! I have killed a sub-Lieutenant of your regiment!"

Rebaut looked earnestly at the young dragon, perceived his sorrow, and said bitterly:

"You do your work well!"

PEOPLE UP THE ANCHOR. Peculiar Views of Life Entertained by Eskimo Men and Women.

These people in the white world, these children of the snow and ice, give themselves little concern regarding what is going on in outside beyond their own little climate in which they live and the limitations of their whole environment make it impossible that these men be unchanged in their own manner of life, and they do not care for the changes that soap and water might make in their domestic life, while the women of the white world are continually adopting changes in methods of cooking that might make some of the dishes they prepare much cleaner and far less deadly than they used to be. But there is still a difference in the homes of the most affluent of the Eskimos offers but little in the way of variety in food, and the question as to whether a Canadian housewife, "What shall we have for breakfast?" or for dinner or supper never troubles the Eskimo housewife, since the man who makes the meal is the one who is at a time and are prepared in the primitive way in which they were prepared by the Eskimos of generations past.

The dress of the women and the men is so much alike that if an Eskimo lady's husband's clothes happen to be lost, then her husband will get them in to buy some Eskimo society function, without exciting any comment as to her dress.

In some other lands, the man is regarded as the head of the family, to the woman, and the birth of a girl is never regarded as a blessing. Indeed, it often happens that both the father and mother resent the unwilling folly of tears and lamentations when it is announced that a newcomer is a girl. A boy can become a great success, but a girl is nothing but a girl—she is she.

A more cumbersome of the earth, regardless of the fact that she works as many hours a day as and even more than the man, and she is the goal of her ambition and miseries. Not to marry is as sad a misfortune as may befall her, and if she is married and widowed she makes up her pastime in securing a second partner.

Sorry For Him.

A laborer was engaged in the grounds of an insane asylum, and received instructions to pay no attention whatever to the remarks of the inmates.

Some little time after he commenced work the governor of the asylum, a well known doctor, looking at the progress of the work, suddenly requested another physician. The physician dug steadily on and never lifted his head. The doctor raised his voice, but the laborer went on working without any notice of him. The physician threatened, stormed, and finally thundered out:

"Don't talk to me about Englishmen, I know all the pretense and affectation has just got him." On arriving in London when I was out with a party of friends I happened to say, "Look at that rubber-neck over there," referring to a man who was always taking us in. An Englishman in the party laughed uproariously at the expression much to my surprise, it being such a common sight.

Last night I met him here in New York. I was at a cafe with some friends. He came across and said to me:

"It always has amused me, don't you know, that expression of yours in London in regard to the chap with the elastic throat. I have never forgotten it."

Rough on the Metropolis.

A New Yorker died and went to heaven. This man had round growing, as most New Yorkers do, finding fault with everything and saying that he couldn't see that heaven was much better than earth.

"Why, say," he observed in a shade who happened to be near, "this place is all undermined with dynamite, just like New York, and you are not being blown up as you are being ground to pieces in some sulphurous abattoir or other. I don't see the use of coming to heaven."

"Please me, my dear boy," said the shade to whom he was talking, "you have made a slight mistake. This is not heaven."

Rail Self Possession:

Not long ago a young couple entered a railway carriage at Sheffield and were immediately put down as a bridal pair. But they were remarkably self possessed and behaved with such sang froid that the other passengers began to doubt the first marriage.

As the train moved out, however, the young man rose to remove his overcoat, and a shower of rice fell upon him, while the passengers smiled broadly.

But even that did not affect the youth, who also smiled and turned to the other, remarked audibly:

"By Jove! May I've stolen the bridegroom's overcoat?"

It is the common wonder of all men how among so many millions of faces there should be none alike.—Brown.

LIME IN HOGPENS.

Value of This Disinfectant and How to Use It.

Many have the opinion that the only use for lime is for whitewashing and use it very sparingly for that. The mechanical effect of a good coat of whitewash is well worth its cost, to say nothing of the added appearance.

Lime is one of the most reliable disinfectants and deodorizers that we have at our disposal for the cleaning of houses and buildings.

We use it in the form of whitewash.

It is very effective for that.

The mechanical effect of a good coat of whitewash is well worth its cost, to say nothing of the added appearance.

THE HORSEMAN.

Cohrs should be kept together while being weaned, because the companionship helps them sooner to forget their dams and keeps them from fretting.

For the Horse.

Unless the horse is doing regularly, his coat is never complete and his joints and sinews will stiffen. While it is true that some horses will sleep in a standing position and continue to work for many years, it is equally true that they will never much better if they rested naturally.

Exercise the Stallions.

It is very important that stallions which are kept for stock purposes receive daily exercise for some time previous to beginning stud service and should be brought into condition before entering on the part of the owner or manager to have this done will be able to give the stallion a reputation for not being a sure feeler. Daily exercise is just as important for a stallion to help him acquire the best qualities of the most nutritious feed, and both are necessary to put and keep the stallion in proper condition to be a sure feeler and impart vigor and strength to his foals.

Watering the Work Horse.

When a horse is dry to the summer weather, probably pulling on a dead strap all the time, is not often enough for the work horse to be watered. The average man finds it necessary under such conditions to drink much often. This causes the body to become weak and the horse ought to make provision for watering the animal as often as we water himself.

Value of Grooming.

When a horse is very fat or overheated the best thing to do for him is to give him a good rubbing down. This will frequently quiet the horse in this particular way, as they look upon it as a matter of appearance only. The health of the horse depends upon the condition of its skin to a much larger extent than is generally known. Grooming stimulates and curries stimulate the surface circulation and produce a feeling of well being throughout the whole system, which materially improves the digestion and assimilation of food.
